- 11.2. Group Transactions with the following characteristics are subject, in addition to the prior examination and approval of the Company, to the provisions set forth in Articles 7 and 8 of this Procedure:

For these purposes, reference is made to the notion of control provided for by Article 2359 of the Italian Civil Code and not to the definition relevant to the identification of related parties.

- (i) these are atypical or unusual Transactions, meaning those Transactions which, due to their significance, relevance, nature of the counterparties, subject of the transaction, method of determining the price and timing (near the end of the financial year), may generate doubts about the correctness or completeness of the information in the financial statements, conflicts of interest, protection of company assets, protection of minority shareholders;

- 12.6. The parties for which potential interests are indicated are, in any case, different from Related Parties. The interest can be relevant even if indirect (for example, through a close family member). The declaration should also indicate the companies, with the exception of the subsidiaries and affiliates of the Company, in which the person who makes it holds positions of director, statutory auditor or executive with strategic responsibilities or with which he has a significant commercial, financial or professional, with particular attention to those who exercise, even indirectly, activities in the same sector of operation of the Company.

- 12.8. In the event that the person with an interest is a director, the report of interest is brought to the attention of the chief executive officer (or to the chairman of the board of directors in the event that the subject with an interest is the chief executive officer), who informs the other directors and the board of statutory auditors.
- 12.9. In the event that the person bearing an interest is a statutory auditor, the report of the interest is brought to the attention of the other statutory auditors and the chairman of the board of directors.

Interest arising from the mere sharing of one or more directors or other executives with strategic responsibilities between the Company and its subsidiaries or associates are not considered significant. A Related Party of the Company is deemed to have a significant interest, for the purposes of this article 13.2 (iv), when it holds the counterparty of the transaction in the subsidiary or associated company, purpose, "operating activity" is understood to mean the main revenue-generating activities of the Company and all other management activities that cannot be classified as "investment" or "financial". To assess whether a transaction falls within the "ordinary exercise" of operating activities, we refer to the object, the recurrence, the size, the contractual terms and conditions and the nature of the counterparty to the transaction. For the purposes referred to in this article 13.3, an "investment" is considered: (i) any transaction that results in the purchase or sale of fixed assets (for example purchases and sales of property, plant and machinery or intangible assets) to exception of "non-current" assets which are held for sale; (ii) financial investments that do not fall within the so-called "cash equivalents". On the other hand, a "financial asset" is considered to be any activity that determines changes (i) in the size and composition of the paid-up equity; (ii) of the loans obtained by the Company. "Conditions equivalent to market or standard conditions" are conditions similar to those usually applied to unrelated parties for transactions of a corresponding nature, size or risk, or based on regulated tariffs or on imposed prices or those applied to subjects with whom TAS is required by law to contract for a certain consideration. On the other hand, a "financial asset" is considered to be any activity that determines changes (i) in the size and composition of the paid-up equity; (ii) of the loans obtained by the Company. "Conditions equivalent to market or standard conditions" are conditions similar to those usually applied to unrelated parties for transactions of a corresponding nature, size or risk, or based on regulated tariffs or on imposed prices or those applied to subjects with whom TAS is required by law to contract for a certain consideration.

- 14.1 Without prejudice to the disclosure obligations pursuant to the CONSOB Regulation, the chief executive officer, on the basis of the information received from the Area Managers, informs at least quarterly:
- a) the board of directors, the Committee and the board of statutory auditors regarding the Transactions of Lesser Relevance and the Transactions of Greater Relevance carried out, with particular reference to the nature of the correlation, the executive methods of the Transaction, the terms and conditions of the Transaction, the valuation procedure followed, the underlying reasons as well as any risks for the Company and its subsidiaries;
 - b) the board of directors with regard to the execution of the framework resolutions;
 - c) the Committee and the Board of Statutory Auditors regarding Related Party Transactions excluded from the application of this Procedure which have in any case been carried out.
- 14.1. On the occasion of Transactions of Greater Importance, the Company must prepare an information document pursuant to art. 5 of the CONSOB Regulation.
- 14.2. If the Company, during the financial year, concludes with a Related Party, or with subjects related to the latter, Transactions that are homogeneous or carried out in execution of a unitary plan which, although not individually qualifiable as Transactions of Greater Importance, exceed the relevance thresholds indicated in Annex 3 of the CONSOB Regulation, when considered cumulatively, the Company must prepare an information document. In this case, the provisions of article 5 of the CONSOB Regulation will apply.

Definitions relevant to this statement

Control and joint control

Control is the power to determine the financial and management policies of an entity in order to obtain benefits from its activities.

Control is presumed to exist when a person owns, directly or indirectly through its subsidiaries, more than half of the voting rights of an entity unless, in exceptional cases, it can be clearly demonstrated that such ownership does not constitute control. Control also exists when a person owns half, or a smaller share, of the voting rights that can be exercised at the shareholders' meeting if he has:

- (a) control of more than half of the voting rights by virtue of an agreement with other investors;
- (b) the power to govern the financial and operating policies of the entity under a statute or an agreement;
- (c) the power to appoint or remove the majority of the members of the board of directors or of the equivalent corporate governance body, and control of the entity is held by that board or body;
- (d) the power to exercise the majority of voting rights in meetings of the board of directors or the equivalent corporate governance body, and control of the entity is held by that board or body.

Joint control is the contractually agreed sharing of control over an economic activity.

Significant influence

Significant influence is the power to participate in the determination of the financial and management policies of an entity without having control over it. Significant influence can be obtained through the ownership of shares, through statutory clauses or agreements.

If a person owns, directly or indirectly (for example through subsidiaries), 20% or a greater share of the votes that can be exercised in the shareholders' meeting of the investee, it is presumed that he has significant influence, unless it can be clearly demonstrated that the contrary. Conversely, if the person owns, directly or indirectly (for example through subsidiaries), a share of less than 20% of the votes that can be exercised in the shareholders' meeting of the investee, it is assumed that the investor does not have a significant influence, unless such influence cannot be clearly demonstrated. The presence of a person in possession of the absolute or relative majority of the voting rights does not necessarily preclude another person from having significant influence.

The existence of significant influence is usually indicated by the occurrence of one or more of the following circumstances:

- (a) representation on the board of directors, or equivalent body, of the investee;
- (b) participation in the decision-making process, including participation in decisions regarding dividends or other distribution of profits;
- (c) the presence of significant transactions between the investor and the investee;
- (d) the exchange of managerial personnel;
- (e) the provision of essential technical information.

Executives with strategic responsibilities

Executives with strategic responsibilities are those individuals who have the power and responsibility, directly or indirectly, for the planning, management and control of the company's activities, including the directors (executive or otherwise) of the company itself.

The effective members of the supervisory bodies (board of statutory auditors and supervisory board) are also considered to be included in the category of “managers with strategic responsibilities”.

Close family members

Close relatives of a person are considered to be those family members who are expected to influence, or be influenced by, the person concerned in their relations with the company.

They may include:

- (a) the spouse who is not legally separated and the cohabitant;
- (b) the children and dependents of the subject, of the spouse not legally separated or of the cohabitant.

Subsidiary company

A subsidiary is an entity, even without legal personality, as in the case of a partnership, controlled by another entity.

Associated company

An associated company is an entity, even without legal personality, as in the case of a partnership, in which a shareholder exercises significant influence but not control or joint control.

Joint venture

A joint venture is a contractual arrangement whereby two or more parties undertake an economic activity subject to joint control.

Interpretative principles of definitions

In examining each relationship with related parties, attention must be paid to the substance of the relationship and not simply to its legal form.

The interpretation of the above definitions is made by referring to the set of international accounting standards adopted according to the procedure referred to in Article 6 of Regulation (EC) no. 1606/2002.
